

Writers are Invited to Submit their Manuscripts

Matt Hardy*

Editorial office, Trade Science, UK

Corresponding author: Matt Hardy, Editorial office, Trade Science Inc., UK, E-mail: matti_h@hotmail.com

Received: April 09, 2021; Accepted: April 23, 2021; Published: April 30, 2021

Announcement

First and foremost, we would like to express our gratitude to the Open Access Journal's editors for their tireless efforts. Organic chemistry is the study of organic compounds. An Indian journal has teamed up with more than 50 eminent Editors in the field of organic chemistry to publish high-quality articles. We use an Editorial Tracking System, which is an online manuscript submission, inspection, and tracking system, to ensure consistency in the peer review process. Before being published by the publisher, any citable manuscript must be reviewed by at least two independent reviewers; review processing is performed by members of the Journal's editorial board or outside experts.

Writers can send manuscripts to the method and monitor their progress in order to complete them. We are grateful for the invaluable contributions of our board members to both our rigorous companion audit framework and the critical success of the Journal we distribute, as you are all aware. The Journal community is made up of specialists from around the world who specialize in similar logical distributions. All submitted papers go through several stages to ensure delivery continuity. The compositions are audited in the same way as other documents are. The almost endless supply of paper can be used as a starting point for screening. In either case, two free references are included with the appropriate posts. The comments of the arbitrators are taken into account by the Editor-in-Chief, who is responsible for making the final decision. Giving timely and positive feedback to our respected creators is a top priority so that their art can be made accessible to the rest of the world on time. COVID-19 has wreaked havoc around the world, posing problems for everybody. Several researchers and technicians continue to face problems such as laboratory closures and online teaching while still coping with the impact of the pandemic on their daily lives. Some of the editors, reviewers, and authors of numerous publications are also pandemic-fighting doctors. As a result, delays are unavoidable during this pandemic, and we would like to express our gratitude. Our Editors and Editorial Advisory Board must discuss the themes we distribute as well as represent the countries from which our submissions are submitted.

Furthermore, our journal has aided early-career researchers. Researchers/Scientists/Authors are invited to submit their CV and research interests to join the Editorial Board, where they will collaborate closely with the Editors and Reviewers to ensure a high-quality and timely review process.

Please submit your updated CV, research interests, biography, and recent photograph (JPG) to E-mail: organicchemistry@tradescience.org if you are interested in joining our Editorial Board.

Manuscripts should be sent to <https://www.scholarscentral.org/submissions/organic-chemistry-an-indian-journal.html>. The editors are looking forward to working with the newcomers over the next few years. I cordially welcome all members of our board of directors, as well as those who have chosen to join our esteemed group of researchers.