

We Cordially Invite you to Serve as a Reviewer for Organic Chemistry, an Indian Publication

Matt Hardy*

Editorial office, Trade Science, UK

Corresponding author: Matt Hardy, Editorial office, Trade Science Inc., UK, E-mail: matti_h@hotmail.com

Received: January 17, 2021; Accepted: February 16, 2021; Published: February 24, 2021

Announcement

First and foremost, we'd like to express our deepest gratitude to the editors of the Open Access Journal. The study of organic compounds is known as organic chemistry. To publish high-quality papers in the field of organic chemistry, an Indian journal has collaborated with more than 50 eminent Editors. To maintain continuity in the peer review process, we use an Editorial Tracking System, which is an online manuscript submission, examination, and tracking system. Every citable manuscript must be reviewed by at least two independent reviewers before being published by the publisher, review processing is done by members of the Journal's editorial board or outside experts.

Writers will submit manuscripts to the method and monitor their progress, with the aim of having them written. As you are all aware, we are extremely thankful for the indispensable contributions of our board members to both our robust companion audit framework and the vital progress of the Journal we distribute. The Journal group is made up of global experts in similar logical distributions. All submitted papers go through several stages to ensure delivery continuity. The compositions are audited in the same way as other documents are. The seemingly limitless supply of paper serves as a jumping off point for screening.

The Editor-in-Chief, who is responsible for reaching a final decision, considers the arbitrators' comments. Giving our respected creators timely and constructive feedback remains a top priority so that their work can be made available to the rest of the world on time. COVID-19 outbreak has caused massive disturbances globally leading to challenges for everyone. Several numbers of researchers/technicians are still facing challenges like laboratory closures and arrangement of online teaching and also simultaneously dealing with the effects of this pandemic situation on their day to day lives. Some of the editors, reviewers, and authors of various different journals are also physicians who are battling the pandemic. Therefore, delays during this pandemic period are inevitable, and therefore we would like to convey our thanks. It is significant that our Editors and Editorial Advisory Board ought to address the themes we distribute as well as reflect nations from where our entries come.

Moreover, our journal has supported researchers in their early-career. Researchers/Scientist/Authors are invited to share their CV and research interest with us and become a part of the Editorial Board Member, where they can work closely along with the Editors and Reviewers to provide the same high quality and quick review process. If you are interested in joining our Editorial Board, Please send us your updated CV, Research Interest, Biography, Recent Photograph (JPG) E-mail to organicchemistry@tradescience.org. The editors anticipate working with our recently added individuals throughout the next few years. I invite all our board individuals and expand a warm greeting indeed to the individuals who have chosen to join our recognized rundown of researchers.